Your 5-year-old has likely left their teetering toddler years long behind them and are well on their way to becoming more coordinated and precise in their movements as they enter the school-age years. At age 5, many children will start to look less like a chubby-cheeked toddler and more like the lanky grade-schoolers they will become.

As parents, we make it our goal to do whatever we can to improve the lives of our children. We read books, research various topics, provide social interaction, and ask lots of questions because we know early child development within the first five years of life are critical. One of the topics that become so important in parenting is our child's physical and cognitive development.
